

EU project to increase knowledge of CAM

A European Union (EU) funded project has recently been launched, aimed at improving knowledge about complementary and alternative medicine (CAM) in Europe.

Included in the many specific objectives of the project is the establishment of an EU network involving centres of research excellence for collaborative projects, the development of consensus-based terminology to describe CAM interventions, review of the current legal status and policies governing CAM, exploration of the needs and attitudes of EU citizens with respect to CAM.
